- Adapt the story, what other vegetable or plant could grow out of control? Maybe a different animal eats it and changes? Write your own version of the story.
- What other ideas can you think of for the safari animals to do to attract more visitors?
- Can you think of another way that they could have got rid of the giant beetroot? Draw a picture and describe it.
- Act as a newspaper journalist telling the breaking news of the giant beetroot. You could write this as a newspaper or present your own news broadcast.

- Explore beetroot; touch it, taste it, smell it, cook with it and even have a go at painting with it.
- Find out how to grow a beetroot, how will you do it? What will you need?
- Design and draw/make your own safari. What animals would you have in it? Could you make a leaflet about your safari? What would be the main attraction? What are the animal feeding and attraction times?
- Find out about a real safari and watch some videos.

What animals did you see? Which were your favourite? Maybe you could find out more information about your favourite safari animal.
- Design a poster to advertise the amazing purple zebra.
- Can you compare this story to the enormous turnip? How are they both the same? How are they both different?
